What happens in lowa if Roe v. Wade is overturned?

By Katie Akin Iowa Capital Dispatch

If the U.S. Supreme Court overturns Roe v. Wade, as a leaked document suggests it might, abortion will not immediately change in Iowa.

Politico released a draft of a Supreme Court decision to strike down the precedent, which Justice Samuel Alito called "egregiously wrong from the start."

The drafted opinion is not the court's final decision, which is expected later this year. If a majority of justices rule as they did in the draft, abortion laws will be left to state governments to decide. Many Republican-led states have already passed restrictive "trigger laws" that are ready to take effect as soon as Roe drops.

But the process in Iowa is more complicated due to state-level legal precedent. Republican leaders will need to address the state's constitutional protections before they can successfully restrict abortions in Iowa. What happens if Roe is overturned?

The Iowa Supreme Court ruled in 2018 that the state constitution protects abortion - a precedent that will remain in place, regardless of the Roe v. Wade outcome.

"It will have no effect in Iowa," Sarah Stoesz, president of Planned Parenthood North Central said. "There's States. nothing on the books in Iowa that would cause our health centers to shut down, should Roe be overturned."

Under current law, Iowa prohibits abortions after about 20 weeks of pregnancy.

doesn't But that mean change isn't on the horizon for Iowa. The Iowa Supreme Court is expected to consider a legal challenge to a 2020 law requiring a 24-hour waiting period for abortions. That decision may overturn the 2018 ruling and determine that not recognize the right to terminate a pregnancy. A proposed constitutional amendment would say that Iowa "does not recognize, grant, or secure a right to abortion or require the public funding of abortion." That amendment needs to pass through the next General Assembly before Iowans may vote on it in an election.

Before this week, legislative leaders have said they await the U.S. and Iowa Supreme Court decisions before taking further steps on abortion in Iowa. Following leaked document. the Republicans in both the Iowa House and Senate emphasized that the decision was not vet finalized.

In a statement, Senate Majority Leader Jack Whitver said there was still "uncertainty" about the court's final decision.

"Uncertainty remains about the final decision regarding abortion by both the US Supreme Court and the Iowa Supreme Court," Whitver said. "Despite the questions surrounding those decisions, Iowans can be certain Senate Republicans have, and will continue to lead on life."

House Speaker Pat Grassley took a similar stance on Twitter.

Gov. Kim Reynolds issued a short statement reaffirming her pro-life stance.

"As we await the Supreme Court's final ruling, our mission remains as clear as it has ever been," she said. "We are fighting to defend the most important freedom there is: the right to life."

There have been few bills on abortion at the Capitol this year, as the constitutional amendment passed through the General Assembly in 2021. The Senate passed a bill last month to fund nonprofit groups that promote alternatives to abortion. The House has not passed the bill yet.

think of the pending decision?

Republicans in Iowa's D.C. delegation applauded the Supreme Court for considering the overturn of Roe v. Wade.

"For nearly half a century, the Roe v. Wade decision has allowed for the destruction of innocent life in America," Rep. Randy Feenstra said in a statement. "I am incredibly encouraged that the Supreme Court appears to finally recognize the injustice this misguided decision has caused and I remain committed to protecting all life.

Rep. Ashley Hinson said she would "continue to champion pro-life policies support expecting and mothers."

"If it is true that Roe v. Wade's days are numbered, countless lives will be saved, but our fight to protect innocent life isn't over." Hinson tweeted Tuesday morning.

Washington Post The reported Monday that Sen. Joni Ernst may lead legislation to ban abortion at six weeks, if Roe v. Wade is overturned. Ernst did not immediately issue a statement on the leaked Supreme Court document. Republicans also criticized the leak of the document.

United States Supreme Court decision is a betrayal of our democratic institutions and an attempt to undermine our Federal Judiciary System that must be investigated immediately," Rep. Mariannette Miller-Meeks said in a statement.

Democrat in Iowa's D.C. delegation, criticized the drafted decision. She urged the Senate to pass the Women's Health Protection Act, a bill that would essentially codify the Roe v. Wade precedent into law.
